SUMMERTIME

It was a cooling off fall, with its presidential campaign; a dizzy old winter, with its threatened outbreaks in Europe, and a hectic old spring with its industrial tie-ups and commercial depression, but this is the good old summertime. Life is short and time is fleeting, and why should we be always in a hurry and nursing a perpetual worry?

Last month we slipped into our B. V. robe and this month we ought to take a lesson from the weather and slip out of our long accustomed mental trappings and go dashing headlong to the open pastures, where the grass is lush and the birds are singing as joyously as before the Kaiser descended upon Belgium, bringing in his wake such a scourge of plagues as would have made early Egypt appear a pleasant paradise by comparison.

We've grown accustomed to look upon life darkly. We have had wars and famers of war. We have known sufficiency of evil and doubt. Our minds are weary of the turmoil and strife. We long for the quiet ways we knew before the war. And damn summer is knocking at the door and leading us east of the sea and shaking the sleep from our eyes, to shake the problems that we have not been able to solve, and go a-summering.

And he is a wise man who will listen. There is something in the season that demands relaxation. It is not by accident that the railroads run excursions from June to September; it is not by chance that the seaside and mountain and lake resorts are in full blast then; that the schools are closed. When the sun is high, the inclination to mental effort is low. Even the rancher who rejoices in the heat of summer pauses for breath between the seasons of harvest and fall plowing, and all the rest of us should take the hint and do likewise.

It is a summer again, both the thermometer and the almanac prove it. Therefore, "a fig for a year, a fig for a week; let the world come, let the world go" until fall breezes blow.

MYSTERIES OF THE DEEP

"They that go down to the sea in ships, they that do business in great waters," encounter perils as of old. The mystery of the Cyclops still remains, and now three other ships which sailed away have not reached port and four departments of the government are engaged in an effort to discover their fate. The mystery is deepened because it was in a calm sea off Cape Hatteras that the vessels disappeared.

A schooner ashore with all sails set but no crew, and a bottle which contained a scrawled note are the only evidences of tragedies, if such they were, that have come to light. Were they seized by some modern buccaner adopting up-to-date methods in piracy? One guess at present appears to be as good as another. The ships are gone and that is all that is known.

Ever since men ventured on broad waters the sea has furnished mysteries. The fate of untold numbers of ships is unknown. They sailed away never to be seen again and the sea kept the secret. But in modern times, with wireless connection with the shore and the other appliances of safety, together with the absence of pirates that once were the scourge of the seafaring, the unexplained disappearances have been few. Even where disaster befell and none escaped to tell the story perhaps wreckage mutely related the tale. The situation is as perplexing as any mystery ever woven by a writer of romance.

PULPIT RECRUITS

Churchmen see features in the reduced enrollment of some theological schools which satisfactorily account for the lessened number of pulpit recruits. There are various fields of social endeavor attracting earnest natures that believe they can serve humanity as effectively in those directions.

With the churches becoming more and more interested in welfare work young men are giving thought to that sphere of religious usefulness, where in earlier years the pulpit was the center of church activity.

It is a long road these days that has no soft drink stand.

England, France and Italy are trying to prevent Greece from going to war with Turkey. Why not bring the power of the league of nations to bear?

NO VACATION FOR PRESIDENT

President Harding, it is announced from the White House, will take no lengthy vacation this summer. Many invitations have been extended to him to spend the heated season at various resorts, but he will stay on his job. He will take a few weeks' leave in order to get brief rests from the cares of his lofty position, and these will constitute his vacation. As he has remarked with regard to his season, he will be a "hessler" also.

Sticking to duty is a laudable trait and since there is much to be done the president's decision is commendable, but at the same time he should have a care not to overdo himself too closely to his duties. Even a president needs a signal for his health. Washington possesses anything but a pleasant climate. It is enervating when the heat of July and August descends upon the capital. It is of a nature to sap the vitality of the most vigorous. This in connection with the exhausting routine that befalls the occupant of the presidential office tests endurance to the utmost.

Since his induction into office, President Harding has not spared himself. He has reversed the procedure of his predecessor and daily makes himself available to persons who have suggestions to offer or who come seeking favor at his hands. He is scarcely more secluded and is reached almost as readily as when he was a private citizen conducting a newspaper in Marion. His disposition not to hold himself aloof has been abused to some extent. This is wearing, but his decision to have no "summer White House" is evidence of his devotion to the duties which have been imposed on him. He regards the honor as not one for enjoyment, but as position for service.

ADVERTISERS TO MEET AT TACOMA FROM JULY 3-10

(By Associated Press)
 TACOMA, Wash., June 29.—All in readiness here for the 1920-21 convention of the Pacific Coast Association of Advertising Clubs from July 3 to 10 inclusive.

An extensive program of entertainment has been arranged by the Tacoma Advertising club, the host for the convention. Men of national reputation in the advertising and publicity fields are expected to take part in the discussions devoted to every branch of merchandising, advertising and selling.

The convention is arranged in three sections, the business sessions occupying July 5, 6 and 7. The preliminary work and entertainment begins July 3. The last part of the program includes a trip to Rainier National park on July 8.

Entertainment on July 4 will center in a military and advertising parade through the business section, automobile races at the Tacoma speedway in the afternoon and a military spectacle and fireworks display in the stadium at night.

On Mount Rainier a midsummer snow trolly will be held for the convention delegates and visitors. A feature will be a special Ad club ski-jumping contest in which winners of the Northwest Ski tournament will participate.

STUDENTS TO GET CAVALRY TRAINING

(By Associated Press)
 MONTEREY, Cal., June 30.—Cavalry training is being given at the Presidio of Monterey here for six weeks this summer to 172 college men from the Oregon Agricultural college, University of Arizona, Texas State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts and the New Mexico Military Institute.

During the college year the students now here are members of the reserve officers' training corps units at their schools. Only western universities with cavalry companies are represented.

Lenine is discovering that his theories won't work, in which he finds, doubtless, that they are not much different from himself.

To Swim or Not to Swim

THERE are bathing suits and bathing suits in materials and styles that differ considerably, designed to meet the needs of women who do more or less—considerably less—swimming. They may be conveniently classed as swimming suits, bathing suits and beach suits—and in buying them one has to bear in mind just what tests they will be put to.

The logical swimming suit is made of pure wool turns freely inside, elastic and shaped to cling close to the figure. It should properly and hold its shape indelibly. Such suits are made in three varieties and they consist of short close-fitting trunks reaching no more than the knees and an overgarment that may be short or long, the trunks, sleeves and having a round neck. They may slip on or button on one shoulder. Half hose and stockings up to match often accompany them and they are usually woven in two colors, as orange and black, blue and red, green and white, black and red and so on. Such suits are for the real business of swimming and are concerned chiefly with being simple and substantial.

For the average woman a bathing suit spends considerably more of its time on the beach than in the water and is designed to be attractive as well as useful. Such a suit is pictured, made of a light-weight, woven wool and ornamented with braid. It has trunks somewhat longer than the overgarment and is pictured in black and white, worn with black silk stockings and white canvas shoes. There is a slash of the fabric that slips through slides and ties at the front and a pretty cap of rubberized cloth brightens up this very smart looking affair. It is not so close fitting as the regulation swimming suit—which fact often is advantageous to its wearer—and it is becoming.

THE WOODS

THE BIGGER THING

JUST yesterday I watched an ant
 Abolish in the summer sun;
 I saw his puffin' tail on point.
 With little burdens, one by one,
 A wisp of snow-crook honey.
 Once kept him busy for an hour,
 An ant pulled long he scuffed that day.
 To sit around a hollow in flower.
 The sand he carried 2000 by grain.
 Great boulders that he had to lift—
 An' with his antennae he beam.
 He sunk his shaft of pin he drift.
 An' then in night a bigger thing.
 To watch the little thing must know.

Laughter reveals character.
 There are those who give themselves over to laughter unthinkingly; there are others who hold back to the breaking point, and if you are trying to make them laugh, you turn with a look of triumph when at last the ice is broken. All of these differing cases between character and we are not far wrong when we say, "Let me hear you laugh and I'll tell you what sort of a being you are—whether you are a good companion or a strenuous one; whether you must take care that you do not get even with us. I'll tell you whether you are cynical, cruel, good-natured, honest or not to be trusted."

SURE.
 He: Would you be satisfied with love in a cottage?
 She: In a $25,000.00 one—yes.

SELLS LEIS TO REAR FAMILY

HONOLULU, T. H., June 30.—Mrs. Haina Lane, aged 53, who reared and educated a family of five children on the product of her hands, the making of leis, or garlands of flowers, was killed recently by a falling rock while gathering materials for her work.

For 30 years Mrs. Lane, who was a native Hawaiian, made her leis and sold them on the streets and at the docks, where incoming and outgoing travelers always are bedecked with these garlands in the old Hawaiian custom.

BLACK BEAR STEALS SIGHTSEERS' LUNCH

(By Associated Press)
 TULARE, Cal., June 30.—Sightseers who left their sedan at the foot of Moro Rock here recently in Giant forest while they climbed the path on foot to witness the view of the Kaweah peaks and the San Joaquin valley returned to their car to find a black bear comfortably seated on the cushions eating their sandwiches. When it had finished its meal the animal, which was not full grown, left the automobile leisurely, while the former occupants of the car stood behind neighboring trees and watched the bear, and lunch, depart.
